

Course: Anthropology 122S: Race and Minorities
Professor: Gregory R. Campbell
Office: Social Science Building, Room 231
Office Contact: gregory.campbell@mso.umt.edu

Course Description: Race, ethnicity, and minority are powerful cultural and social constructs in American society. This course will explore from a critical anthropological perspective the concept of race to assess its validity as a biological and socio-cultural category. In the latter portion of the course, we will examine the relationship between race, ethnicity, and minority status among the major ethnic groups of the United States, outlining their political, economic, and cultural struggles for societal equality.

Course Objectives: 1. Students will comprehend the nature, structure, and historical development of race and ethnicity in the United States and how those constructs have affected societal relationships. 2. Students will understand the role of critical race theory in explaining social phenomena. 3. Students, employing qualitative and quantitative data, will assess and evaluate the significance of race and ethnicity as social phenomena.

Required texts Campbell, G., Many Americas, Kendall Hunt Publishers.

Course Reading Assignments: Students are required to read required materials as assigned by the instructor. You also are responsible for all the other materials, including movies, for the tests.

Optional texts: The works below offer you supplemental reading and insight into issues of race, racism, and ethnicity. Those of you that are interested in these matters should have these works in your library.

Dunbar-Ortiz, R. D., An Indigenous Peoples' History of the United States, Beacon Press.

Keeanga-Yamahtta, T., From #Black LivesMatter to Black Liberation, Haymarket Books.

Critical Ethnic Studies Collective, Critical Ethnic Studies: A Reader. Duke University Press.

Pinder, S.O., Whiteness and racialized Ethnic Groups in the United States: The Politics of Remembering, Lexington Books.

Extra credit: For those who would like to strive for a superior grade, a student can obtain one or more of the optional readings and write a critical book review relating the work to the course content. The book review must be 3.5 to 5 double spaced pages. The review will address what the book was about, how the work relates to the course, and your substantive opinion about the work. The extra credit will be worth 20 possible points per book. The assignment is due the last lecture day of class. No late assignments will be accepted after that day.

Course requirements: There are two exams during the course, a midterm (100 points) and final (100 points). The structure and content of the test will be disclosed during the in-class test review sessions. Grading is on a straight point system.
