COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course provides an overview of theoretical and intellectual developments in anthropology. We will begin with an overview of theoretical approaches in anthropology and then focus on a series of controversies in anthropology, many of which begin early in the history of the discipline and which continue into the late 20th century. These case studies will highlight major issues in the field and the course of intellectual development within it. The course will employ a case study and discussion, as well as lecture. This course also meets the upper division writing requirement and requires substantial written work.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

1. Students will gain knowledge of the history of anthropological theory and key concepts.
2. Students will acquire an understanding of critical issues in anthropology.
3. Students will increase their insights into the intellectual development of anthropology.
4. Students will improve their ability to analyze and resolve critical issues encountered in anthropological theory.
5. Students will improve their knowledge and abilities in professional anthropological writing.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

Course Evaluation:
Presentations: All students will be divided into small groups early the class. During the last 3 weeks of class, each group will give an oral presentation and lead a class discussion comparing two contrasting theoretical approaches to a particular anthropological topic. Presentations are worth 20% of your grade. See “Guide to Oral Presentations” on Moodle.

Reading Journal: All students will post a weekly reading journal entry over that week’s assigned readings. These will be posted on Moodle and are due on Tuesday of the week assigned at midnight. (Students have until Friday at midnight on the first week of class). Reading Journals are worth 20% of your grade. See “Guide to Reading Journals” on Moodle.

Discussion: This course is designed for students to engage and discuss theoretical issues in order to develop analytical and critical skills. Active participation by all students is required to achieve this goal. All students are expected to read all assigned materials and to be ready to discuss them in class. All students are also expected to contribute to the growth and development of other students through the fair and constructive discussion of their presentations. Each Thursday starting with week 5 will be devoted to a discussion section. Discussion counts for 30% of your grade. See “Guide to Discussion” on Moodle.

Research Paper: Each student must write an original research paper on one or more anthropological approaches to one of the topics addressed in this class. You will need to outline the central assumptions and methods of analysis of the approach(es) analyzed, as well as list significant proponents of the approach(es) and their contributions to the analysis of the topic. You then need to critically evaluate the approach, its utility and contributions to anthropological understandings of the topic. Students must submit a finished draft on Moodle for comments and correction on Monday, April 20, which will be returned on Moodle on April 27 for revision. A revised version which addresses my comments is due on Moodle by May 11. I will not accept any final papers unless you have previously submitted a draft in a timely manner. The paper must be 10-15 pages long and use 10 scholarly sources other than those required in class (you may also use works read in class in addition to your ten required sources). The research paper is worth 30% of your grade, with 1/3 of that based on the draft version and 2/3 based on the finished paper. See “Guide to Research Papers” on Moodle.
Attendance: Because this class is geared to discussion and participation, attendance at all classes is required. All absences, except those which are truly unavoidable, will result in the loss of points. If you are ill, have a work conflict, or experience a personal or family emergency, you must contact me before class to let me know that you will not be there.

Academic Honesty: The University of Montana expects its students to be academically honest, particularly in regard to plagiarism. “Plagiarism is the representing of another’s work as one’s own.” Both copyright laws and University policies are rigid as concerns plagiarism. Consult the current “Student Conduct Code” for details regarding penalties for plagiarism.

Students with Disabilities: If you need special accommodations, you should contact Disability Services for Students to make arrangements and let me know if there is anything I need to be aware of or that I need to do to assist you.

Access: This syllabus, along with reading assignments, all guides, announcements, etc., will be available online through the university’s Moodle system.
